Glen Denny scaled the big walls of Yosemite Valley with many of the climbing icons of the 1960s, including Warren Harding, Royal Robbins, Tom Frost, Yvon Chouinard, Chuck Pratt, and Layton Kor. The sixties were a golden age in Yosemite Valley. It was an era of first ascents and all-night parties in Camp 4. Camp 4, home to a small group of committed climbers who dropped out of the mainstream of work and society to perfect their climbing skills on the granite walls of Yosemite. Camera in hand, Glen captured both the gritty reality and the sunny optimism of those years on film. This slide show, based on Glen's book, Yosemite in the Sixties, gives an insider's view of the classic ascents and colorful characters of this important era through images, stories, and anecdotes. The show is approximately 70 minutes long and followed a Q&A session.
